Andrew James McGerrigle dies in Ormstown hospital

Andrew James McGerrigle (Andy) was born in Ormstown on August 21, 1904, the son of James and Sarah McGerrigle. He had two brothers, Douglas (who predeceased him), and Burry.

He was educated at Ormstown Academy and McGill University. He was active in sports, especially running.

During his teaching career which was spread over 34 years, he taught in many parts of Quebec. His favorite and most rewarding experience was at Grenville. Here he encouraged Country singer Ronnie Prophet to start a musical career which still continues. Andy believed in active participation in sports and development of one's talents.

In 1950 he married Mary Baugh. He and his wife adopted a ready-made family of three who made their life fuller and richer.

Andy retired in 1964 and returned to live in Ormstown. He played an active role as town councillor, Lion's Club member, and co-founder of Walshaven for seniors.

He died on Friday, Mar. 11 at the Barrie Memorial Hospital, leaving behind his wife Mary; his three children, Bob of Montreal, Stewart (Ida) of Alberta; and Gerri (Armand) of Rockland, Ont., also seven grandchildren, many nieces and nephews and his brother Burry.

The funeral service was held at St. James Anglican Church on Monday, Mar. 14 with Canon Horace Baugh and Rev. John Johnson officiating.

During the service, grand-daughter Jennifer Paquette read the following tribute:

"In memory of our grandfather, Andrew: Our grandfather is the best grandfather ever. Just a minute ago, you were here, but now you're gone. Where did you go? Why did you leave? Will you be back? Do you still love us?"

"Mommy told us you went on a peaceful trip to heaven, because God needs you and you won't be coming back. It will be very strange without you. She also says that you will always love us wherever you are. We know we will always love you and we will always remember you in our hearts as our special grandfather who treated us with love. We all love you Papy, goodbye and rest in peace."

Pallbearers were Dr. John Whitehead, Geoff Miller, Amos Martin and Leigh Coffin.

Andrew McGerrigle will be sorely missed by all who knew him
