Huntingdon's Angels

At the far end of Chateauguay Street sits a small two storey building known as the Huntingdon County Hospital. It is small enough that it blends in nicely within this residential area. Inside the walls of this little hospital is hidden a very big secret. Behind these walls it is filled with love and dedication by the nurses that work there. You may not see them at first, but if you look closely you will see wings on each of the nurses' backs. They are true angels that walk the halls and care for our loved ones. Their kindness, compassion and genuine love of their work and their patients (and family members) is an example that any hospital could learn from. This is what real nursing is all about. These angels took exceptional care of my sister and once again exceeded themselves and proved their dedication in the care of my dad. Special thanks to Elaine Simpson who sat with my mother until I returned to be with her myself. Special thanks to each and every one of these angels. No words can express my gratitude and admiration to each of these ladies who walk the halls of the second floor.

Love to all of you
Jeanne Campeau
